DECATUR, ILLINOIS:
Saturday Evening, March 25.

The complete returns from New Hampshire show an aggregate vote of 80,290, which is 1,123 more than the vote last year. Gov. Cheney's vote is 41,740, 2,454 more than he had last year, the Democratic vote is 33,126, 903 less than last year's vote, and the Prohibition and scattering votes' foot up 424, which is 338 behind last year's figures. Governor Cheney's majority is 3,190, and his plurality over May is 3,614. Full returns from the legislative elections give the Republicans a majority of 31 in the House, and thus insure them a majority of 37 on joint ballot.

The New York Herald started the whole story about Secretary Bristow, in which Mr. B. was charged with assisting a fraud upon the United States treasury and receiving for his services something like $50,000. The yarn was completely exploded, whereupon the Herald emphatically remarked: "We repeat that Mr. Bristow never received a better service than when the Herald gave him the chance of going before the House committee. We congratulate him upon his triumphant vindication, and then we congratulate the country upon having at the head of the treasury a statesman who has been tried in the crucible and found to be the finest gold." The plain English of this is that when you publish a foul calumny upon a man, known to be such, and which is afterward cleared away in a manner to convict you of being a cowardly liar, you do the slandered man a great service in allowing him the opportunity to prove his innocence. This beautiful moral code is susceptible of infinite variety, and is about worthy an utterly characterless paper as the Herald.

A Kentucky legislator, with a good appetite, has invented a new method of inducing the House to adjourn for dinner. It was already two o'clock, and several abortive attempts had been made, when our hungry friend sent by one of the pages for a large piece of bacon, which he proceeded to broil on the fire in one of the large projecting fireplaces of the House. Soon the dinner suggesting odors of the broiling meat began to spread through the House and satiate the appetites of battalions of hungry members, and in less than five minutes another motion to adjourn was carried like a shot.

A European correspondent thus writes of Strauss, the composer of dance music:

"It is as nervous as a composer as he is as a director. Clad in a velvet costume with patent leather boots reaching to his knees, eyes alight, and in a fit of inspiration, he goes striding about the house like a maniac. If inspiration does not come to him in the saloon he clutches his papers, and goes to his bed room or his wife's boudoir. Sometimes the waltz begins in the parlor is finished in the kitchen. Frau Strauss, who appreciates and understands her John's habits, has half a dozen pianos scattered through the house, and in every room a table with writing materials, so that in whatever nook her Herr finds himself he is quite at home. It was only through her influence that he was induced to undertake dramatic work at all."

The Confederate majority in the House of Representatives showed that they are still intent on discovering "how not to do it," by their course on Wednesday last, on the bill prohibiting government clerks from contributing to election funds. Mr. Blaine's amendment, proposing to ligulate Senators and Representatives in Congress in the prohibition, though rejected by a vote of 102 years to 97, exposed the "lunatic" character of the measure. As Mr. Blaine said, Congress can pay $50 campaign funds, where the government clerks pay one dollar, and yet the majority refused to cut off this most fruitful source of corruption—if to contribute to a campaign fund is corruption, as the majority seemed disposed to assume. If the supporters of this bill dared to express their purposes plainly, they would simply prohibit the Republicans from receiving contributions for the payment of necessary expenses of election campaigns, while they would do nothing to prevent the intimidation of Republican voters in the South by armed Democrats, such as was witnessed so extensively throughout Mississippi last fall, and justified by leading Democrats. One point, however, has been gained in the passing of this bill, and that is the constitutionality of the Congressional legislation on the subject of elections in the states, in spite of the outcry of unconstitutionality in the past. It is to be hoped that the Senate will insert Mr. Blaine's amendment, and thus put the intentions of the Democracy to the test.

OLD TECUMSEH.

General Sherman Says His Say on the Corruption of the Times.

(Speech at St. Patrick's Banquet.) At this moment the air is full of calumny, and it is sickening to observe that men usually charitable and just are made to believe that all honesty and virtue have taken their flight from earth, that our National Capital is reeking with corruption; that fraud and peculation are the rule, and honesty and fidelity to the exceptions. I do not believe it, and I think we should resist the torrent. Our President has surely done enough to entitle him to absolute confidence, and have no motive to screen the wicked or guilty. At no time in the history of the Supreme Court at Washington, down to the district courts, been entitled to more respect for their learning and purity; and Congress is now, as it ever has been, and must be from its composition, a representative body, sharing with the mass of the people its feelings and thoughts, its virtues and vices. If corruption exist, it is with the people at large, and they can correct the evil by their own volition. If they have grown avaricious and made money their god, they must not be surprised if their representatives and servants share their sin. What are the actual facts? We have recently passed through a long civil war, entailing on one moiety of the country desolation and ruin—a fearful debt—States and cities followed the fashion, until the whole land became deeply in debt. The debts are now, with colored soldiers, for 15 cents worth 35 cents, at Linn & Scruggs. Feb. 16th, 1876.

A CONVERSATION WITH GENERAL SCIENCE.

Reporter in New York Graphic.

The writer called on Gen. Schenck yesterday at the Brevard House, and found him pleasantly ensconced at a writing desk in room 33. After a kindly greeting and a polite reference to the fair and independent course that he had pursued in all matters that had come under his cognizance, the General was congratulated upon his opportune arrival. He replied:

"Yes; I am here. They wanted the truth, and they shall have it—then rising, and with a suggestion of indignation in his tone, he added)—the whole of it.

He was asked to define his position on one of the points that had been raised by his enemies. He answered:

"No, that would be improper. I have come home under these accusations to report myself to my government. I shall do that fully, freely, and I believe, satisfactorily. What I have to say will all come out in a few days, but it would be manifestly improper for me to enter into any explanations here and now."

His manner was open and unconstrained, and it was impossible to feel in his presence that he could ever stoop to an underhanded action. His years of absence from the country have grizzled his hair and closely-out beard, but the vigor of his iron constitution was evidenced in every movement and utterance. What his treatment by the English people was referred to, he remarked with some warmth of manner upon the kindness and friendship that had been continued toward him in that country up to the last hour of his departure, and added that he only hoped to meet with equally fair and friendly treatment here.

DANIEL DREW'S ORTHOGRAPHY.

Daniel Drew was the only man who knew the word by which his combination safe was opened. One morning he was ill and did not get down to his office, so they sent to get the word. The messenger was told it was the word "door," but he worked with it a half hour and the safe remained closed. He returned to the old gentleman. "What word did you say?" "Door, door," he shouted, when the clerk suddenly remembered that Mr. Drew was eccentric in some things, asked, "How do you spell it, sir?" "Such ignorance! D-o-a-r-e, of course." The safe opened.

Col. Nicholas Smith (Ida Greeley's husband) has a clever article in the Galaxy on the inconvenience of being named Smith, in which he gives us some new and amusing variations on an ancient theme. He endeavors to console himself and his vast family by deriving the name from the word Shem, through the following etymological changes, Shem, Shem, Smith, Smith.

ONE OF THE ASTORS SUED FOR DEFORMING A CHILD.

Albany Journal.

The circuit court in Poughkeepsie yesterday was occupied in the trial of a case of extraordinary interest throughout Dutchess county. The case is entitled Josephine Ash, by guardian, vs. Henry Astor, one of the millionaire family. The plaintiff sues for $20,000 damages, and avers in the complaint that in September 1869, in the town of Red Hook, the defendant wilfully thrust the plaintiff, who then being but four years of age, from a chair by reason of which violence, she is crippled for life. In the evidence of plaintiff it appeared that in response to a question by him whether she had ever seen him drunk, she responded in the affirmative, when he hit her in the small of the back, and knocked her from the chair to the floor.

Since then she has been unable to walk; her backbone is around on her hips and she has to go about on all fours at home. It was further testified that Astor promised to deposit $5,000 to her credit in the bank, if nothing was ever said of it. Various other evidence was taken to confirm the above facts.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—The chairman pro tem of the committee on foreign affairs says on account of the illness of Minister Schenck, he will not appear until Tuesday.

General Sherman arrived this morning and called on the President previous to the cabinet meeting. The general was also at the war department and had a private consultation with Secretary Taft. The secretary thinks General Sherman should resume his station here, and to the fullest extent have charge of the ordinary business belonging to his office. The consultation, to day, was brief.

Mrs. C. P. Marsh came into the room of the committee on expenditures in the war department, accompanied by her husband. She was born as a witness, and testified that she left Cincinnati in 1865, where she formerly resided, and has lived in New York most of the time since that year. Had known Mrs. Bowens, now Mrs. Belknap, since 1860, and had been at the same hotel with her in Cincinnati four years. Mrs. Bowens is now York where Mrs. Bowens was a widow at the time. Mrs. Bowens was a widow at the time. Witness commenced housekeeping in New York in the summer of 1871. She went to Europe in company with Mrs. Bowens the last of June, 1872, and knew Mr. Pendleton's name was on the list of passengers.

Witness was asked whether she had any conversation with Mrs. Bowens, now Mrs. Belknap, relative to her interest in the Kentucky Central railroad claim.

Witness answered that two or three weeks ago, at the Arlington Hotel, I asked Mrs. Belknap whether she ever received any money on account of the claim. I told her that I had heard she received $70,000. Mrs. Belknap answered that the claim was only for $100,000, and how could she receive $70,000. Witness said she had simply mentioned it to Mrs. Belknap as an idle rumor. She had always talked to Mrs. Belknap as she would to her sister. Had heard the rumor for over a year. She related to General Kiddoo the conversation between her and Mrs. Belknap. Did not know of Mr. Pendleton paying money to Mrs. Belknap on account of the Kentucky railroad claim or of his making her presents. She never heard the secretary of war say anything about the contract between her husband and Evans.

Upon cross examination, witness said she understood Mrs. Belknap as denying that she received anything. In response to a question by Mr. Clymer, witness said she saw Clymer but once, and that was three weeks ago, when she was introduced to him by her husband, and their conversation had no reference to coming before the committee.

Marsh was recalled and interrogated by Clymer. He testified that he left Washington for New York the day the impeachment report was presented, the 2d of March, and did not return to Canada.

Question—On the evening of Wednesday, you came to my lodgings and saw me a moment. Tell me what transpired.

Answer—From something said at the table, I inferred that Belknap was not only liable to impeachment but to criminal prosecution. I said to you, if the secretary is in danger, I am in danger. You replied that I was not in danger. Marsh said Clymer did not attempt to alarm him, but pacified him. When he got to New York he saw the newspapers and that alarmed him, and on consulting his counsel was rather encouraged to leave.

Clymer here said that he had told the witness that he could not be prosecuted for anything said before the committee.

Witness being interrogated, said he was not positive that the government had concluded to prosecute him as well as Belknap. He had hesitated at Peck, kill whether to go to Canada or return to New York.

MEMPHIS, March 24.—There is considerable uneasiness here in regard to an overflow, as the river is, to-night, within two and a half feet of the dangerous line and rising rapidly, while all the rivers emptying in below here are at flood tide.

CHICAGO, March 24.—Advices from friends throughout Iowa and northern Illinois, indicate that the snow storm, commencing this morning and ending late to-night, has covered the ground in these sections to a depth of from four to ten inches. This is the heaviest storm of the season, but as the weather is mild the snow is melting rapidly, and in a day or two will probably be entirely gone.

LONDON, March 25, 7 a. m.—The Daily Telegraph's Paris special reports that the dikes protecting Herzogsbach, in Holland, have been swept away by the floods. Railway bridges and railroads are destroyed. The town is completely isolated. A hundred houses have disappeared, and six thousand persons are homeless.

Newspaper borrowers have no sense of respect, no idea of honor, and are totally devoid of modesty. They are a class of people who may justly be termed vampires, who feed upon the fruits of others. They prefer to borrow your newspaper, but if they cannot borrow, they don't hesitate to steal it. ## ANNUAL MEETING OF THE DECATUR FIRE DEPARTMENT.

In response to a call issued by the chief engineer, nearly one hundred members of the department met at their hall on Friday evening, March 24th.

Chief engineer Provost occupied the pulpit — Edwin Carter Secretary.

The minutes of the last annual meeting were read and approved.

The chief stated that the nomination and election of a chief engineer and assistants, to serve for the ensuing year, would be proceeded with.

On motion an informal ballot was taken for chief engineer, which resulted as follows:

H. B. Durfee, 53; John Ullrich, 15; Wm. Dodson, 6.

Fireman Ullrich declining to serve, H. B. Durfee and Wm. Dodson were put in nomination.

The election was by ballot, which resulted as follows: Durfee, 59; Dodson, 27.

The election of Mr. Durfee was made unanimous.

The election of 1st and 2d assistant engineers resulted in the selection of Wm. Dodson as 1st, and John Ullrich as 2d.

Edwin Carter was re-elected secretary by acclamation.

Speeches were made by the chief officers and others present.

Fireman Christie, secretary of the state firemen's association, stated that the state parade and tournament would be held in this city this year. It being the first parade of a state association there would undoubtedly be a large number present. Nearly twenty cities had signified their willingness to compete in the tournament. It will need the hearty co-operation of our citizens to make it a success.

There being no further business the meeting adjourned.

EDWIN CARTER, Sec.

Belligerent Demonstrations.—Some time yesterday forenoon a couple of chaps from Springfield were engaged in a game of cards in one of the saloons on the levee, when a fellow by the name of Flazee entered the saloon and, according to the story of one of the fellows who was hit, pitched into the Springfield fellows without ceremony or provocation, blacking their eyes and otherwise disfiguring their faces. Neither of them was inclined to make any complaint, but Marshal Haworth came across one of them up town and took the to the office of Justice Hughes — Flazee was also found and taken before the same court, where he was confronted by his victim, upon the strength of whose story a fine of six dollars and cost was imposed upon him. The other Springfield chap declined to go before the court, saying that he could fight his own battles and attend to his own business.

For the Centennial.—The samples of scholarship in the Decatur schools are now ready for shipment to Philadelphia, and were shown to us yesterday by Prof. Gossman. The samples embrace the work of students in every grade of the ward and high schools, and of every class in each grade, and of every branch of study pursued.

The samples are neatly bound, and are in all respects creditable to the teachers and scholars in our schools. An examination of the books shows the progress made in passing from one grade to another. The samples are in the form of questions and answers, which are written out in full, and show the work as done by the scholars; so that while the standing of the student in the particular branch represented by the example is indicated, the penmanship and orthography are also known.

For Grumblers.—The following which we clip from an exchange contains so much truth, that is, as applicable to Decatur as to any other town, we print it for the benefit of our readers, and ask for it their particular consideration:

The man who is a benefit to any community — the man who is a desirable resident in any town or city, is the man who always tries to help build it up, who works for its interests, who will help develop it. The man who sits around and grows and snarls at everything, is a curse to any community.

The men of life and energy, who endeavor to correct evils instead of growing about them, are the men who give growth and enterprise to a town or city. The drawback to any town is grumblers, and the more wealth and influence that class of people possess the worse it is for the place they curse with their residence.
